Office Hours: Mondays 4-5, or by appointment

Course Description

In this module, we will consider debates about the nature of the self in classical Indian philosophy. We will look at two Buddhist (Abhidharma and Madhyamaka) theories of the self. We will then examine some arguments that the non-Buddhists (especially the Nyāya and Mīmāṃsā philosophers) gave against these theories. Along the way, we will also discuss some of the questions that these debates raise in epistemology and ethics: for example, whether our memories give us any reason to believe in an enduring self, and whether denying the existence of the self can help us justify altruism.

Course Objectives

Through reading and careful analysis of key Sanskrit and Pali texts on the self (in translation), study of this module is intended to give students an overview of classical Indian metaphysics, ethics, and epistemology.

Intended Learning Outcomes

In this module, students will develop the general skills appropriate to a theoretical philosophy module at this level. They will also learn to engage with challenging classical Indian texts: they will familiarize themselves with the key concepts used in these texts, reconstruct the arguments offered in them, and critically assess these arguments.

Assignment Structure

For undergraduate students, the summative assessment will be a 3500-word essay, and for postgraduate students, it will be a 4000-word essay. Both of these will be due on December 19, 2018.

Attendance

Please see UCL's Attendance Policy (for more information see https://www.ucl.ac.uk/academic-manual/chapters/chapter-3-registration-framework-taught-programmes/section-3-attendance-and-absence)

Attendance of seminar meetings by students is mandatory. UCL recognises that students may sometimes miss seminars due to genuine extenuating circumstances, such as illness or bereavement. Therefore, provided that a student has an attendance record of 70% or higher, the student is eligible for the summative assessment in a module, and can gain credit for that module. If, for whatever reason (even illness or bereavement), a student's attendance is lower than 70%, then they can potentially be barred from summative assessment in the module, which will mean they are 'incomplete' in it. If a student is incomplete and it is their first attempt at the module, they have to resit. If it is their second attempt, they can't graduate.
